OLD SCHOOL STYLE

Mr. Mitchell Reflects On His High School Life

Life was for a lot of our teachers growing up was different from how we live now. Mr. Mitchell went to a school with only 260 people in total and with a class of 65 students. All the students wore uniforms that made them look like what he says were, "the Campbell's Soup Kids." Everyone knew each other and everything that was going on in the school. During lunch girls had to eat on the second floor, boys on the first floor, no mingling was allowed. The only choice of classes they had during their four years was between French and Spanish and whether they would take Latin 3 or 4. The athletics department consisted of only had 3 sports: boys and girls basketball and baseball. The sport of girls basketball was very different from our game today. It consisted of only half-court with little defense and only scoring from the guards and forwards. While many things are the same, there were definitely some differences between how they grew up and how we do now.

Thoughts on Folk Group - Alex Bluhm

The King Philip Folk Group, also know as the Casual Folk Implosion, is a group of friendly music lovers getting together to celebrate life and good music. Run my master fiddler Andrew Grove, The Casual Folk Implosion meets every week and occasionall has a gig or two. The group is internationallu acclaimed and even had a Greman transfer student named Findan Cote keep rhythm for them. As president of the group, when asked about The Casual Folk Implosion, I simply stated "We make folk music do what it do!" The senior members of the group include Alex Bluhm on banjo, Trevor McGill on mandolin, Bryan Glickstein and Chris Lalos on guitar and on base guitar, bab boys, Brendan Smith and Conor Hutchinson. Other members of the group include, Matt Procyk, Jake Ziegler, Kyle Kurkjian, Kayla Harvey and Jennifer Fitzgerald.
